NOW YOU CAN FREEZE YOUR CREDIT FOR FREE

Beginning on September 21, 2018, consumers have a new tool to use when they are trying to protect themselves against fraud and identity theft.

Security freezes, known as credit freezes, make it difficult for identity thieves to open new accounts in your name. All three of the nation's credit reporting agencies (Experian, Equifax and Transunion) formerly would charge to put a security freeze on your credit. Not anymore.

The Federal Trade Commission has a blog posting explaining the details of the freezes, and how to go about freezing—and unfreezing—of your accounts. To view that article, log on to: https://www.consumer.ftc.gov/blog/2018/09/free-credit-freezes-are-here?utm_source=govdelivery.
